Climate change has no border or bias. It does not care whether you are rich or poor, big or small. Last month the World's second largest emitter of greenhouse gases, the US withdrew from the Paris climate agreement. It now becomes even more relevant for the rest of the world to accelerate their efforts towards climate change mitigation and adaptation.

India has taken the lead by firming up its stance to follow a low carbon growth trajectory to fulfill the aspiration of its opening economy.

Influential global conglomerates and business houses have recognized the threat climate change poses for their survival over the longer term. This is the silver lining and has set the tone of these large organization.

- iii) How does climate change affect business?
- iv) Write the opposites of : relevant and recognized

- Q.6 Write a précis of the passage given. Give a suitable title to it. (10)

Education is not an end, but a means to an end. In other words, we do not educate children only for the purpose of educating them; our purpose is to fit them for life. As soon as we realize this fact, we will understand that it is very important to choose a system of education which will really prepare children for life. It is not enough just to choose the first system of education one finds; or to continue with one's old system of education without examining it to see whether it is in fact suitable or not.

In many modern countries it has for some time been fashionable to think that, by free education for all –whether rich or poor, clever or stupid- one can solve all the problems of society and build a perfect nation.
