There is no greater form of worship than to plant or preserve a tree. It is the living contact between the devotee and the God. Every devotee must, therefore, plant at least one tree in the shrine which he loves most. Time and again learned people appealed to the whole country to help in restoring our sacred places to their pristine beauty. In the past people have appealed for the planting of trees at the Samadhi of Gandhiji at Rajghat, at Dehotsarga and at Kanchi, because they felt that this was the noblest way in which religious feeling could be translated into action, and our whole life, physical, mental and spiritual, made more inspiring.
