A dying declaration is a statement, written or verbal, made by a person as to the cause of his death or as the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. In case of homicide, statements made by a person, since deceased are admissible to prove the cause and circumstances of the man's death. Any statements made by a dying person as to the injuries which have brought him or her to that condition or the circumstances under which those injuries cannot be inflicted are called 'dying declaration'.
