I have mentioned the names of some of the great ones of those times. One of the greatest of these, I have not yet mentioned. his name was Socrates . he was a Philosopher, always searching for truth. Tim him the only thing worth having was truth and often discussed difficult question with his friends and acquaintance, so that out of the discussion truth might emerge. He had many disciples or chelas and the greatest of these was Plat. Plato wrote many books which have come down to us, and it is from these books that we know a great deal of his master, Socrates. Evidently government do not like people who are always trying to find out things: they don't like the search for truth. The Athenian government this was just after the time of Pericles – did not like the methods of Socrates and they held a trial and condemned him to death. They told him if he promised to give up his discussions with people and changed his ways they would let him off. But he refused to do so and preferred the up of poison which brought him death to giving up what he considered his duty.
