Youngsters simply don't like talking anymore.

Texting or using social media is fine. Even earphones will do, as long as speaking to someone can be avoided. Here's what a survey from British Communications regulator, Ofcom, revealed. About 15 percent of 16-24 year olds don't want to use their phone to speak to people. They would rather use instant messengers. The same research also said that teenagers would even message people sitting in the same room, at times, next to each other; but not talk to them. 'We have moved into a noiseless and soundless world, where we hear only our voices and the sound through our earphones buzzing.'

- i) Do you think young generation avoid speaking to someone? Give reasons.
- ii) What changes do you find in the ways of communication why?
- iii) Give the antonyms of
 - a) noiseless
 - b) reveal
- iv) Make sentences using
 - a) at times
 - b) rather
