- Q.4 Read the following passage and answer the questions: (10)
- On the surface, writers and ballet dancers seem to have nothing in common. In reality, the qualities of a good writer mirror the qualities of a good ballet dancer. One such quality is motivation good writers are motivated to learn new and better ways of telling a story. Ballet dancers learn many new and better ways of performing certain movements. Another similarity between the two is the importance of dedication. Good writers spend hours every day developing their language skills, ballet dancers spend hours increasing their accuracy and endurance. Finally both professions hope to entertain their audience– writers, with their themes and language and ballet dancers, with their movements and outfits.
