A driver once told me that he had recently lost his son-in-law to Corona, his son had eloped with a girl he loved and his wife, whom he loved very much, had become mentally unstable due to these developments. I felt extremely sorry for him and could sense his voice almost trembling at some points. Yet, his hands were steady as a rock as they drove the cab and his eyes firmly on the road. At a traffic signal, he opened the window and gave some money to a child beggar standing outside. He also cracked a joke and made the little one smile. I could only admire his resilience and humanity.
